Degree Offered

Master of Arts

Program Description

The Department of Theology offers graduate programs aimed at providing students an integrated approach to theology emphasizing the scriptural, historical, systematic, and ethical approaches to study in the Catholic and Christian religious traditions. We aim to develop scholars capable of making significant contributions to theological research and teaching a broad range of subjects in theology and religion. Our programs have prepared graduates to secure teaching positions in over 200 colleges, universities, and other educational institutions as well as for vocations in pastoral ministry and other service-oriented and non-profit organizations.

The master of arts in theology (<https://www.marquette.edu/grad/programs-masters-theology.php>) program has distinct specializations designed for students who intend to pursue doctoral degrees in theology or religious studies. It also has specializations designed for those working or aspiring to work in Church-related organizations involving teaching, religious formation, or other forms of theological communication, and for those seeking personal theological enrichment.

Theology Master of Arts (M.A.)

Specializations: Christian Doctrine, General Studies, Historical Theology, Judaism and Christianity in Antiquity, Systematic Theology/Theological Ethics, Theology and Society

Students must complete 30 credit hours of course work and submit an approved final project. Students choosing the Judaism and Christianity in antiquity, historical theology, and systematic theology/theological ethics specializations must demonstrate proficiency in a modern language other than English. The following program description summarizes those requirements. Additional information may be found in the Department of Theology's Policies and Procedures (<https://www.marquette.edu/theology/policies-and-procedures.php>).

Required Course work

All students must complete the following required core courses:
