

Law School

From the Dean

Law School website (<http://law.marquette.edu>)

People choose a specific law school for many and varied reasons. I know that many of you will select a school because you believe it is the "best" law school you can get into. Some of you want to attend a school in a particular geographical region, while others of you will select an institution because you believe its program offers specialization in certain fields of the law. Perhaps some applicants want to attend a school with a particular religious affiliation. And all of you are concerned about the cost of legal education, and the value and marketability of your J.D. degree once you graduate.

These are all valid considerations, and Marquette merits your serious consideration for any of these reasons. However, I suggest there are some other things you should also think about. First, what is your experience in law school going to be like? Will you become part of a supportive family of students, faculty, administrators and alumni? Second, what kind of person will you be as a result of your legal education? Will law school help you to gain a respect for all persons and an understanding of how law can help people resolve difficult problems, often in times of great stress? Will you be a better person after law school, or not?

To me, the law is a helping profession. As a Catholic and Jesuit law school, we have a particular obligation to assure that the education that is provided at Marquette is designed to enhance our students' respect for all people, while assuring that our students become skilled lawyers who can excel in the legal profession.

Marquette provides you with an unusual opportunity. First, we are an outstanding law school. Our curriculum is designed to ensure that you will have the substantive knowledge, skills, and values essential to practice law in the twenty-first century. We are extremely proud that we train lawyers—lawyers who practice in all areas of the profession, in private firms and public agencies, in Wisconsin and throughout the United States. It is no accident that many of our alumni are state and federal judges, and that many Marquette University Law School graduates are business and political leaders. We teach our students to have the skills to succeed in whatever branch of our profession they select. Part of the Jesuit tradition of education is encouraging students to become agents for positive change in society. This is especially important in a law school.

We want our students to be decent people, to give back to our communities, and to be leaders in doing good, both within and outside the profession. We are committed to encouraging our students upon becoming lawyers to provide legal assistance to people who lack the resources to retain counsel and to ensuring that all members of the profession are moral and ethical. We want to use law as an engine for positive change, not as a device to cause anger and unhappiness. Even in the context of adversarial relationships and an attorney's obligation to provide zealous representation to clients, lawyers must be skilled and committed to resolving disputes while maintaining respect for opposing parties and counsel.

Some of you may be concerned about attending a Catholic and Jesuit institution. You might fear that we have modified our curriculum in some way to reflect the views of the Church or the Society of Jesus. Or you might think that we will try to change your present religious belief. In fact, The Society of Jesus, Marquette University, and this Law School are absolutely committed to the core concept of academic freedom and to a full dialogue on every and any issue. Indeed, it is my experience that a broader exchange of views is possible here than at many institutions that are constrained by "political correctness." We are not afraid or ashamed to speak about faith, morality and right and wrong, but we are not parochial in our views. We welcome persons of all backgrounds, religious and non-religious, to our Law School. Law school must be an enriching experience, and part of that enrichment is meeting and learning with people from diverse backgrounds, cultures and religious traditions. We embrace a diverse student body as being essential to a first-rate legal education and a superior law school experience.

We are blessed with an outstanding faculty. The first prerequisite for our faculty is outstanding teaching. Teaching is not a secondary concern at Marquette; it is the primary qualification for hiring, promotion and tenure of faculty. To maximize the formal classroom experience we limit the size of classes and provide a mix of gifted full-time faculty and outstanding adjunct faculty from among the best lawyers in the state. Law faculty and administrators are accessible to students to discuss course material, legal issues, career goals or personal matters. The Jesuit commitment to care for the person is reflected in the way we view students, and how we expect students to view themselves and each other. Our main job is educating you to be highly skilled, highly ethical and moral lawyers and human beings. That requires that we be available to you in and out of the classroom.

There are many fine law schools in the United States. However, I doubt that many schools can offer you the outstanding education, true caring for you as a person and the commitment to make you a better person while you are here. We hope you will give our Law School your serious consideration.

God speed.

Degrees

The Marquette University Law School (<http://law.marquette.edu/>) offers a Juris Doctor (J.D.) and a Master of Laws (LL.M.) in Sports Law for Foreign Lawyers. It also collaborates with a variety of university graduate programs to offer joint J.D./graduate degree programs. Students may also earn a Certificate in Litigation and/or a Certificate in Alternative Dispute Resolution as part of the Juris Doctor program.

As a student at Marquette University Law School, you are part of a caring community. We are committed to providing you with an excellent legal education, with course work that is relevant and intellectually challenging.

The following list includes descriptions of all approved Law School courses. Note: The Law School does not offer each course every year. For information on current course offerings, consult the Law School website (<http://law.marquette.edu/>).

LAW 7000 Civil Procedure (4 credits)

An examination of the progression of civil cases, including jurisdiction, pleading, discovery, pretrial practice, the civil trial process, and post-verdict proceedings. The principal objectives of the course are to equip students with an understanding of the civil litigation process, to contrast the processing of a civil case with that of a criminal case, and to explore the roles of plaintiff and defense counsel.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207000>)

LAW 7001 Constitutional Law (4 credits)

An introduction to the constitutional system of the United States, organized around 1) the judicial role in the constitutional scheme; 2) the allocation of power between the national government and the states; 3) the division of authority among the branches of the national government; and 4) the limitations imposed upon both national and state government for the protection of individual rights. The course exposes students to alternative theories of constitutional interpretation and contrasts constitutional decision-making with the resolution of disputes under statutory or common law.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207001>)

LAW 7002 Contracts (4 credits)

An examination of the principles governing the formation, performance, and enforcement of promissory obligations. The principal objective of the course is the development of the foundational skills of legal reasoning and legal analysis, skills that the course seeks to develop principally by examining how judge-made common law rules emerge and evolve and how lawyers facilitate that evolution through the representation of clients. In addition, the course will contrast the challenges to the lawyer posed by common-law rules with those posed by statutes and constitutions.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207002>)

LAW 7003 Criminal Law (3 credits)

A study of the sources and purposes of the criminal law, the definition of crimes, theories of group criminality, and defenses to criminal liability. This course will introduce students to the interpretation and construction of statutes, the use of statutory codes, and will explore the dynamics of the relationship between courts and legislatures.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207003>)

LAW 7004 Legal Analysis, Writing and Research 1 (3 credits)

This course is the first of two courses that introduce students to researching the law, analyzing how the law applies to a set of facts, and writing a document that reflects that research and analysis. Legal Analysis, Writing and Research 1 focuses on predictive legal writing.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207004>)

LAW 7005 Legal Analysis, Writing and Research 2 (3 credits)

Builds on the skills learned in LAW 7004. Teaches students how to implement the legal research process using both print and electronic media, how to analyze the results of that research, and how to write a document that reflects that research and analysis. Focuses on persuasive writing.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207005>)

LAW 7006 Property (4 credits)

This course focuses on ownership, the varieties of interest in land, considerations in the buying and selling of land, and the control of land use through private arrangements and the common law of nuisance. The course also emphasizes multi-stage analysis of legal problems, the intersection of diverse doctrines, and the unique concerns in the practice of transactional law.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207006>)

LAW 7007 Torts (4 credits)

A study of claims and defenses relating to civil liability for the infliction of harm to person and property. Uses of the civil process in shaping and presenting tort actions will also be addressed. The course also will trace the evolution of the common law related to civil liability. Students will consider how social policy shapes the civil duties that are assigned, the standards for the level of care that are imposed, the causation that is recognized, and the damages that are allowed.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207007>)

LAW 7101 Administrative Law (3 credits)

A study of state and federal procedures, including the creation and operation of agencies and their relationship to the courts. Special attention is given to administrative investigation, adjudication, and rule making.

Prerequisite: LAW 7001.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207101>)

LAW 7102 Advanced Civil Procedure (3 credits)

An examination of procedural aspects of civil litigation that builds upon and goes substantially beyond the mandatory first-year course. Particular attention is paid to (1) certain aspects of Wisconsin civil procedure that differ from those of the federal system, and (2) various aspects of complex litigation, such as class actions, joinder, and multidistrict litigation. Additional topics may include extraordinary writs, settlements, and perfecting appeals.

Prerequisite: LAW 7000.

LAW 7144 Criminal Prosecution - Community Partnership (3 credits)

In this course, students will examine the shift of American prosecutors away from a response-driven model to an innovative and nationally recognized proactive model focused on preventing crime and increasing quality of life. Prosecutors across the United States are embracing the idea that communities are the central institution for crime prevention, and the success or failure of prosecutors, police, schools, and families are dependent on that community foundation. Community Prosecutors are now asked to use their legal knowledge in the field with police officers, use their communication skills to reach out to community members, use their courtroom and trial skills to prosecute the most violent criminals, and use their creativity to fashion appropriate alternatives to traditional prosecutions.

LAW 7215 The First Amendment (3 credits)

A comprehensive examination of the speech and religion guarantees of the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Insofar as speech is concerned, the course will, among other objectives, (a) explore the principal categories of content-based expression – among them incitement, defamation, obscenity, child pornography, and commercial speech; and (b) probe the special constitutional rules created for distinctive contexts – such as the American public school – in an effort to reconcile the expressive rights of individuals with the responsibility of government to retain an ordered society. Insofar as the Constitution's twin protections for religious liberty are concerned, we will explore a host of anti-establishment and free exercise concerns. On the anti-establishment side, issues will include prayer, moments of silence, and the pledge of allegiance in the nation's public schools; government-sponsored displays of religious significance; and public financial assistance alleged to benefit religion and religious institutions. On the free exercise side, we will examine the constitutional conflict produced when religious practices – among them Sabbath worship, the rejection of compulsory education, animal sacrifice, drug use, and conscientious objection – meet up with the contrary demands of civil society. This examination will culminate in our consideration of the landmark Supreme Court decision construing the free exercise guarantee in a manner alleged to reflect insufficient concern for the practices of minority religions, the effort in Congress to overturn that decision, and ensuing developments. The course will pause periodically to explore both Wisconsin's contributions to the development of the First Amendment law (for instance, in areas of school choice and crimes of hate) and the ways in which such law plays out on the ground in communities across Wisconsin (e.g., the controversy in Wauwatosa concerning the cross on the municipality's emblem). Satisfies the Law School's public law requirement. Not open to students who have taken Constitutional Law 2: Speech and Equality or Seminar: Advanced Issues in the First Amendment. Satisfies the Law School's Public Law requirement

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207215>)

LAW 7220 Health Care Provider Liability (3 credits)

Focuses on Wisconsin statutory and case law, as well as national trends, in the liability of health care providers. Brought to life by real fact patterns from litigated claims, students learn who is a "patient," what constitutes a "health care provider," and what are the claims and causes of actions that can be brought against those in the health care field. Covers Wisconsin and national standards used to determine concepts such as "causation" of injury, "substantial factor," "sine quo non," "increasing the risk of harm," and "loss of chance." In addition, timely topics such as tort reform, limitations of actions and damages, and public policy related to claims pertaining to health care providers are surveyed and discussed. Effective, efficient, and ethical representation of plaintiffs and/or defendants is part of the course focus.

Prerequisite: LAW 7007 and completion of 27 credits.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207220>)

LAW 7221 Health Law (3 credits)

Introduces topics in Health Care Law including professional licensing and regulation; access to health care; government and private financing roles and strategies; health care reform; quality assurance, patient safety and liability; health care fraud and abuse; discrimination and unequal treatment; privacy laws; workplace violence in the health care setting; issues relating to the provision of behavioral health care; and ethical dilemmas in health care, including those relating to reproductive and end of life care.

Prerequisite: Completion of 27 credits.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207221>)

LAW 7222 Health Care Fraud and Abuse (2 credits)

Health care fraud and abuse encompasses a variety of administrative and judicial actions against individual and institutional health care providers who file false claims for payment, make business agreements involving excessive profits, kickbacks or unnecessary services, or engage in other practices defined as fraud and abuse under federal criminal and civil statutes. Uses statutes, case law and commentary to identify the various forms of fraud and self-dealing, and the law's response. Provides an introduction to the Medicare and Medicaid Anti-Kickback statutes and False Claims Act, and an overview of topics including conspiracy, mail and wire fraud, and RICO as applied within the scope of healthcare.

Prerequisite: LAW 7221, recommended.

LAW 7237 Introduction to Forensic Science and the Law (2 credits)

Designed to provide the student with a comprehensive understanding of today's crime laboratories and investigative techniques used in the proper collection, preservation and analysis of evidence. Students are introduced to scientific and technological procedures as they are applied in today's criminal justice system. Introduces the basic principles and uses of forensic science and presents basic applications of the biological, chemical, physical and medical sciences and their presentation in court with particular attention to patterned evidence examination. Discusses the expectations and the limitations of the forensic sciences. Study the nature and significance of the relationship between the courts and the forensic sciences while examining issues regarding the philosophy of science, the scientific method, the rules of evidence and the conduct of trials. Discusses the level of scrutiny required to admit forensic evidence and the extent to which forensic evidence squares with usual or expected scientific standards and practices. Discusses whether scientific conclusions actually assist the trier of fact to arrive at a decision. Critical thinking skills are tested as the student applies scientific conclusions to legal principles. Addresses search and seizure, the rules of evidence and the rules of criminal procedure which dictate the manner in which forensic science and analysis are introduced and challenged in court.

Prerequisite: LAW 7191; LAW 7134 and LAW 7140, recommended.

LAW 7280 Managed Health Care (3 credits)

Managed Health Care law examines the expanding field of legal practice in the ever-changing health care industry. The movement of many (if not all) employers to some form of "managed care," the continued consolidation within insurance, hospitals, and medical market sectors, and a multitude of proposed and enacted laws and regulations and court decisions make this area fertile ground for myriad types of legal work. Managed Health Care Law offers the student an understanding of the health care industry itself, the rise (and potential recession) of "traditional" managed care, and the significant roles attorneys play in virtually all areas of both. The course will also introduce students to the wide range of practice settings in which lawyers are involved in the health care industry and the various clients they represent.

LAW 7286 Milwaukee Street Law Project (2 credits)

Law students teach a two-semester course to Milwaukee public high school students that is designed to foster in the high school students an understanding of the law, legal process, our system of governance, and effective citizenship. To accomplish this the law students devote three hours per week at their assigned high schools. In the fall semester law students teach such subjects as criminal law and procedure, juvenile justice, driver licensing, consumer law, torts, family law, housing law, and individual rights law. In the spring semester the law students teach basic trial advocacy skills and their high school students participate as lawyers and witnesses in a city-wide mock trial competition presided over by federal and state trial court judges. Throughout the school year, law students also help their high school students develop basic academic skills such as reading, writing, listening, oral expression, problem solving and analytical thinking; they also teach skills necessary for responsible participation in a democratic society. A two-hour seminar is conducted for the law students each week which focuses on substantive law as well as interactive teaching methodologies. Law students are required to submit weekly journals, lesson plans, and timesheets. Among the lawyering skills emphasized are critical thinking, organization and prioritization, planning and preparation, and effective communication with lay persons. Consent required.

LAW 7421 Seminar: Civil Rights Enforcement (2 credits)

Explores the challenges that arise when government entities and legal actors must implement or enforce laws that mandate equality. Among the topics addressed are: competing definitions of equality and the application of doctrines developed as correctives to racial injustice to other protected classes; dynamics of structuralism, federalism and local control that influence and sometimes restrict civil rights enforcement; the limitations of legal and administrative remedies for inequality; and dynamics of equality between civil rights lawyers and their clients. Throughout the term, the Wisconsin's school civil rights enforcement regime is used as a case study to ground the discussion of these big-picture questions.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004 and LAW 7005.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207421>)

LAW 7422 Seminar: Corporate Criminal Liability (2 credits)

Study of the legal issues arising from the criminal conduct of publicly held corporations and their employees. Topics addressed include theories of enterprise punishment, the utility of corporate codes of conduct, the attorney-client privilege in a corporate context, criminal RICO prosecutions, liability for mail fraud and false claims, and strategies in responding to the criminal investigation of a corporate client.

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207429>)

LAW 7435 Seminar: International Intellectual Property (2 credits)

Examines the major international agreements related to patents, trademarks, and copyrights and other forms of intellectual property, which include free trade agreements such as the TRIPS Agreement, substantive treaties enforced by the World Intellectual Property Organization, and associated human rights treaties. Focuses on the scope of the protected intellectual property rights, the limits placed on the intellectual property rights, and the enforcement of the intellectual property rights. Particular attention is paid to how international, transnational, and domestic intellectual property institutions are impacted by the existence of the international intellectual property regime.

Prerequisite: LAW 7232 and LAW 7235, recommended.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207435>)

LAW 7437 Seminar: Jurisprudence of Sport (2 credits)

Explores the ways in which games and sports can illuminate dynamics and problems that arise in law and vice-versa. Both law and sports are primarily rule-governed activities, and thus both present similar fundamental (and thus often highly theoretical) questions regarding the formulation, application, and enforcement of those rules. These questions include: the extent to which formal, written rules (as opposed to informal norms) are the exclusive source of authority; what the mechanisms for the enforcement and application of those rules or norms should be; how to respond to situations in which a decision maker has imperfect information; whether and how to provide a right of appeal; how to distinguish between “cheating” and the strategic use of rules; and how to craft appropriate sanctions for violations.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004, LAW 7005.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207437>)

LAW 7445 Seminar: Law and Literature (2 credits)

Explores the relationship of law and literature, focusing in particular on the portrayal of law, lawyers, and legal proceedings in selected essays, plays, short stories and novels. How and why is the understanding of justice different in literature than it is in the conventional legal discourse?

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207445>)

LAW 7446 Seminar: Litigating the Lessons of History (2 credits)

Explores how originalist and historical arguments shape judicial resolution of hotly contested matters of constitutional law, with a particular emphasis on recent separation-of-powers disputes arising in federal courts of appeals and the Supreme Court. Requires students to read and provide oral and written analysis of briefs, primary and secondary historical sources, and judicial opinions. Students gain a critical understanding of the role that originalist and historical arguments play in shaping constitutional decisions.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004, LAW 7005.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207446>)

LAW 7454 Seminar: Professional and Ethical Identity Formation (2 credits)

Students develop their professional identity and explore topics including cultivating civility, respect, and inclusivity in law practice; developing sound professional habits; engaging in reflective, ethical decision-making, and actively maintaining connection to one’s core values and moral identity. Self-care and lawyer well-being are also addressed.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004, LAW 7005.

Level of Study: Law

Schedule of Classes (<https://bulletin.marquette.edu/class-search/?details&code=LAW%207454>)

LAW 7456 Seminar: Property and Social Identity (2 credits)

Students explore the intersection of property law and social identity, including race, ethnicity, class, sexual orientation, disability, and gender. Focuses on how law attempts to manage social identity, and its impact on doctrine and practice of property law. Subsequently explores the legal framework of dispossession, the relationship of property to space and place-making, and the intersection of property law with revolution and repair. Special attention is paid to how each of these experiences has been at the locus of recent social events including the Black Lives Matter movement. Students examine cutting-edge issues, including environmental justice, real estate transactions, and land-use law, and prepare presentations on issues in diversity, equity and inclusion.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004, LAW 7005.

LAW 7581 Seminar: The Supreme Court (2 credits)

This seminar will be run as a Supreme Court, with the students assuming the roles of both the justices and, in turns, the lawyers. Specifically, we will use cases that will be argued before the Supreme Court of the United States or the Wisconsin Supreme Court in the semester in which the seminar is offered. The students will be required to orally argue one case and to write one majority opinion and one dissent in cases that other students have argued. The course should be of interest not only to students expecting to engage in appellate advocacy, but also to anyone seeking to improve his or her oral and written legal skills.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004 and LAW 7005.

LAW 7584 Seminar: Current Problems in Tort Law (2 credits)

Tort law has always grappled with cutting edge issues created by new technologies. Explores tort law's applicability to several problems that are currently working their way through the tort system in one form or another: liability issues presented by the expected rise of autonomous vehicles, efforts to hold prescription drug manufacturers liable for the opioid epidemic, the use of tort law as a mechanism for addressing harms caused by climate change, litigation against the National Football League relating to the long-term effects caused by concussions, and tort law's response to modern privacy harms that occur online. Begins with an exploration of tort theory, designed to expose students to the diverse range of academic approaches to tort law and help develop a deeper understanding of the tort system. Moves on to a discussion of how tort law can and should (or can't and shouldn't) respond to the various problems listed above.

LAW 7590 Seminar: (When) Equal Protection is Not Enough (2 credits)

Considers five major challenges that the U.S. faces today: climate change, patriarchy/misogyny, racism, economic inequality, and the struggle for democracy. Through a systems-based lens, the class first examines the root causes of these challenges, and the way law currently constructs and applies to them. Explores possibilities for transformational change—cultural, political, economic, environmental, and legal—that are offered by shifting to a relational frame. The readings are interdisciplinary, underscoring how law affects areas outside of the law.

Prerequisite: LAW 7004, LAW 7005.

Through simulated problems and group projects, students explore examples of RJ processes that have been designed to help people heal from genocides, to address racial inequalities, to ameliorate community conflicts, among others. Focuses not only on the historical and philosophical roots of the movement, but also on its widespread international use. By working in small groups, students help design various RJ techniques including victim/offender conferencing, victim/family conferencing, victim impact panels, and Native American based circles, among others. By creating a project for the course, students have the opportunity to examine the current trends in the integration of RJ into the American criminal justice legal system while examining both the constitutional and practical barriers that can arise.
