Criminology and Law Studies

The Criminology and Law Studies major is designed to provide a broad-based liberal arts education for undergraduates interested in careers in criminal justice and law. The major also provides preparation for professional and graduate study in law, criminology and public administration. Students in other major fields of study interested in expanding their knowledge of the legal system may elect criminology and law studies courses.

Courses in criminology and law studies are taught by faculty from both the Klingler College of Arts and Sciences and criminal justice practitioners.

Note:

• CRLS 4986 Advanced Internship and Seminar in Criminology and Law Studies may not be counted toward the major or minor in Criminology and Law Studies.

Major in Criminology and Law Studies

The major in criminology and law studies consists of seven required courses (21 credit hours) and four elective courses (12 credit hours) for a total of 33 credit hours as listed below. The major also requires 6 credits of social science from one or more of the following programs: Anthropology, Economics, Political Science, Psychology, Social Welfare and Justice or Sociology. Students majoring in CRLS must also pass a course in statistics as noted below.
