

Haggerty Museum of Art

The Haggerty Museum of Art connects people—on campus, in the community and around the world—to art, to ideas and to one another. The Museum uses the interdisciplinary lens of art to cultivate knowledge, insight, understanding and belonging, all in service of Marquette University's commitment to care for the whole person.

The Haggerty engages both academic and general audiences in high-impact, interdisciplinary, object-based learning experiences that span all subjects. More than half of Marquette University's students experience the museum's innovative exhibitions, programs and collections each year. The Haggerty Museum of Art is free and open to the public Monday-Saturday. To join the museum as a member, or more information, visit the Haggerty Museum of Art website (http://www.marquette.edu/haggerty/permanent_collection.shtml).
